HOUSE DEFEATS SENATE INCREASE IN ALLOWANCES TO WAR VETERANS

Turns Down Higher Grants
Over Which President
Had Threatened to Veto
Independent Offices Bill
by Vote of 220 to 174.

AGAINST RESTORING ALL OF PAY CUT

Approves Putting Back 10 Per Cent of Reduction,
by Next July 1, but Votes Against 15 Per Cent for Workers.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, March 22.—The House today refused to join the Senate in voting higher allowances for war veterans than the administration desires. A veto had been promised by President Roosevelt if it approved the higher Senate figures.

The vote rejecting the Senate's program was 220 to 174. Speaker
Rainey voted "No."

Earlier the House, by 228 to 164, insisted on reduction of only 10 per cent of cut Federal pay by July 1, instead of 15 per cent voted by the Senate.

The next step will be up to the Senate. It can concur in the House action or again disagree. In the latter event, further efforts would be made by a committee of both chambers to adjust the differences.

The House voted to restore 5 per cent of the cut Federal pay as of
Feb. 1 and 5 per cent more on July 1. The Senate voted for 5 per cent as of Feb. 1 and the full 15 per cent on July 1.

A roll call was taken on the pay cut at the request of Representative Connelly (D., Mass.).
Senate administration leaders
after a check-up of the situation, expressed confidence the Senate would recede in the final showdown from its more liberal pay restoration demands.

The House had provided $209,- 000,000 for the ex-soldiers and Federal workers and the Senate $307,- 000,000. The House amendments were estimated to be $228,000,000 above budget estimates and the Senate's $34,000,000 above.

$30,000,000 LONG ESTATE DWINDLES BELOW $1,000,000

Will of Kansas City Lumberman Leaves Entire Property to Two Daughters.

By the Associated Press.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 22.—
The will of R. A. Long, filed in Probate Court today, showed that a fortune once estimated at $30,000,- 000 had shrunk to less than $1,- 000.

The will, dated July 27, 1932, provided for a division of his estate
between the four daughters, Mrs.
Lula Long Combe and Mrs. Sally
A. Ellis, first setting aside $10,- 000 for their mother. After her income of $30,000 a year for Mrs. Combs during the life of a trust to end in 1939. A paragraph says many bequests made in earlier wills were eliminated from this one because of the decrease in values.

Only the long mansion here, with automobiles and immediate personal effects, was disposed of outright to the two daughters, all other property and securities being established in the trust. The daughters are left free to dispose of the house as they see fit.

Los Angeles Rejects Bonds
FOR QUAKE-PROOF SCHOOLS

Issue of $20,411,000 for Rebuilding
Program Turned Down by Voters.

LOS ANGELES, March 22.—Voters yesterday rejected a proposal to make Los Angeles school buildings earthquake-proof through a rebuilding program financed by a $20,411,- 47 bond issue.

George W. Dill, president of the board, said last night it was likely a plan for an all-year attendance system would have to be adopted to allow the use of fewer buildings.

The Board of Education has $11,- 000,000 available through Federal grant and its own economies. If the bond issue had carried, the board planned to start a $31,287,497 Reconstruction program. The bond is said to have received a heavy affirmative vote but failed to get the required two-thirds.

AIRWAYS PLANE CRASHES AT LIMA, PERU; 3 KILLED

Chilean Ambassador to U. S. and His Daughter
Among the Injured—12
Persons Aboard.

MOTORS GO DEAD WHEN 65 FEET UP

Members of Crew, Two Americans and Englishman, the Fatalities—Officer of Line Escapes.

By the Associated Press.
LIMA, Peru, March 22.—Three persons were killed today when a Pan-American Grace Airways plane crashed at the take-off. On board the plane, and injured in the crash, was Manuel Trocco, Chilean Ambassador to the United States. His daughter was also injured.

Twelve persons were aboard the plane, which was heading southward Chile.

All three members of the crew were killed. They were: Homer V.
Farris, pilot; Lawrence Wagner, radio operator, and Frank Large.

The injured: Ambassador Trucco, hip and pelvis bones fractured;
Senorita Grace Trucco, his daughter, shoulder broken; Senorita Carmen Bustamante; John McGregor, vice-president of Pan-American Grace Airline, a part of Pan-American Airways.

Senator Tydings read into the record a letter written today by President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines. Senate completely including the Tydings measure, and asking its passage without amendments. It was understood this position was reached following a conference Quezon had with Tydings today.

The disturbance started when Hinderberger, who had four Negro women and a Negro man, was advised to the five defendants, who were charged with disturbing
the peace of employees of the Funsten Nut Co. objected. Digrassing from the case on trial he shouted,
"Every four years you hand out whisky and cigars so you will be elected to prey on the people."

Justice Hinderberger ordered Wy-koff to leave the courtroom, at 126
North Main street. The Communist leader refused to go. The husky judge seized him by the arms and was escorting him to the door when Wykoff struck Hinderberger in the face.

It was believed that one of the motors failed at about 65 feet of altitude.

The liner, the San Pedro, took off, five minutes late, on its southbound schedule, at 6:35 a. m. after its departure had been tested. It left the field normally, but watchers heard the motor fail and saw the pilot attempt to turn back for an emergency landing.

With McGregor, who suffered only minor bruises, was another vice-president of Pan American Grace, Capt. Harold Harris. He was not injured.

Ambassador Trucco, who was returning to Chile after the death of his wife, was in the most serious condition of the injured.

AIR LINER THAT CRASHED IN ANDES IN 1932 FOUND

By the Associated Press.
MENDOZA, Argentina, March 22.—
The Pan-American Grace Airways airplane, San Jose, lost in 1932 with nine persons aboard, was found today in the Argentine Andes four miles south of Puerto del Inca.

The plane was discovered by employees of the Puerto del Inca Hotel, where the Pan-American Airways had been staying. It was wrecked and contained bodies.

The air line immediately organized an expedition to the spot, which is near the Chilean border, at the base of Mount Aconcagua, 23,300 feet high, the loftiest peak in the Western Hemisphere.

The first expedition to reach the wreck sent back word that all the bodies were well preserved under a heavy blanket of snow but that two of them were headed.

The disappearance of the airliner for many months was one of the mysteries of aviation. For days after it was lost on a flight between Santiago, Chile, and Buenos Aires other planes cruised back and forth over the regular route, in constant radio communication with Mendoza and Santiago. Other expeditions were sent out on foot, through snow-covered mountain passes, in an effort to determine the fate of the flyers.

The ship carried six passengers and three crew members.

The passengers were: F. E.
Camus, division traffic manager of the airline; J. C. Sabate; O. S.
Perez; E. E. Raffo; Pinkus
Rotzky; F. L. America.

The crew were: Charles J. Robinson, pilot; C. W. Myers, radio operator; A. Woods, steward.

Pilot Robinson left a wife and two children in Chicago. Radio operator Myers had parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Myers, living in Canton, Ohio.

AUTO INDUSTRY'S LABOR LEADERS SEE ROOSEVELT

USE OF LICENSING POWER SUGGESTED

Favored by Green if Compilation Fails—President Heard Manufacturers' Group Yesterday.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, March 22.—A group of labor leaders representing workers in the automobile manufacturing industry met with President Roosevelt today. The President is trying to avert a threatened strike in the industry.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, headed the group which presented the labor side of the dispute to Mr. Roosevelt. After shaking hands with the delegation, Mr. Roosevelt got down to business with a special group of Secretary Perkins, who is scheduled to go to Detroit tonight for a speech.

Automobile manufacturers, who were invited, were standing by for further conferences.

Meeting With Johnson.

The administration is said to favor
a committee to pass upon several hundred charges of anti-union discrimination by manufacturers.

Hugh S. Johnson met with spokesmen of American Federation of Labor locals in Michigan, Wisconsin and Ohio and Missouri this morning.

They laid the discrimination charges against their employers before the NRA head. The workers' representatives informed Johnson that most of the strikes were called off to avoid a strike, all were demanding some concrete work from Washington tonight. The union spokesmen said there were 250,000 men insisting that the case be arrived at once. The A. F. of L., at Green's suggestion, is calling for Government licensing of the automobile industry.

Green has urged the union leaders to reduce their demands to two essentials:

1. That a neutral board be created to pass on complaints of discrimination.

2. That, by election or otherwise, employees be permitted a clear-cut selection of representatives, and that the employers agree to abide by the result for collective bargaining.

President Sees Cummings.

The President, after seeing the motor executives, conferred for more than an hour late yesterday with Attorney-General Cummings.

What Mr. Roosevelt told the heads of General Motors, Chrysler, Hudson and Nash was not officially disclosed. But it was indicated definitely that he did not put before them any formula for ending the dispute.

The executives were reminded that the Government did not demand recognition of the Federation of Labor or any one union, but merely that they deal with chosen spokesmen of the workers must be observed implicitly. They were given opportunity to state their side.

REVELLE TELLS OF TROUBLES OF GRAND NATIONAL

Testifies Mays Was Informed Comptroller Contemplated Suit to Cancel Charter Before Holiday.

TOLD HE COULD NOT RE-OPEN DEPOSITORY

Former Continental Life Officer Says Government Had File of Alleged Violations of Laws.

Charles G. Revelle, who was removed from the board of directors as counsel and a director of the Continental Life Insurance Co., took the stand again today in Circuit Judge Ryan's court and continued his testimony as a witness for State Insurance Superintendent O'Malley in his suit to dissolve the company.

Telling of efforts to reopen the Grand National Bank last November, Revelle testified that Ed Mays, president of the insurance company and the bank, told at the office of the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington that proceedings to cancel the charter of the bank had been contemplated before it was closed by the banking holiday the preceding March.

When Mays submitted a plan for reopening the bank, in which the insurance company has deposits of $610,849, Revelle said Acting Comptroller Awaft objected to Mays continuing in control.

He claimed a file which he said contained a record of violations of the national banking laws by the witness stated, "and said it had been the intention of the office to file a suit in Federal Court to cancel the charter of the Grand National."

"Referring to the file, Awaft said, 'You don't think, as long as we had gone to this trouble, that we would let you open a national bank, do you?'

Awaft suggested that Mays prepare another plan and try to get other persons in St. Louis interested in opening the bank."

The bank now is in liquidation.

Revelle told of a meeting of the board of directors of the insurance company shortly before O'Malley filed his suit. O'Malley and Mays, he said, engaged in a heated argument, pacing the floor at opposite ends of the room. When O'Malley explained that he wished to obtain sufficient supervision to enable him to assure the state superintendents of other states that policy holders were safe in continuing payment of premiums, Mays objected.

Did Not Want Co-operation.

"We don't want you to give them assurances," Mays declared, according to Revelle. "We neither want nor need your co-operation. All you can do for us is to keep your hands off the company."

"You may feel that way about it," the witness quoted O'Malley as replying, "but the policy holders may feel differently."

The trial between Mays and Revelle began in the Missouri Supreme Court Judge and once Insurance Superintendent, developed when Revelle opposed a $400,000 dividend by the insurance company to open the Grand National Bank, because he contended the insurance company's surplus was insufficient. They disagreed violently also on the propriety of loans to directors of the insurance company on collateral questions by Revelle.

After he had voted against a $94,000 loan to A. A. Jekel, a director, Revelle said Mays attempted to get him to change his vote.

When he refused, the witness declared Mays remarked angrily, "If you can't walk along with us on what we are trying to do you had better resign. If you are opposed to this, you will be opposed to later suggestions; I have some rawer than that."

UNION MEN AT BUDD PLANT TO VOTE ON ANOTHER STRIKE

Protesting Against Election Held Tuesday Under Johnson's Direction.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—Members of the United Automobile Workers' Union are to meet tonight to decide whether a new strike shall be called at the plant of the E. Budd Manufacturing Co.

The union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, is protesting against the vote on the question of employee representation held at the Budd plant Tuesday at the direction of NRA Administrator Johnson. Only about 30 employees voted, although 3762 cast ballots in a previous election which was invalidated.

Since the strike of last winter, about 1000 members of the union have been reinstated and tonight's meeting is to decide whether these shall be called on to lay down their tools.

NUA ALLOWS 6 PER CENT OF FOOD PRICES FOR WAGES

Retail Rate Fixed by Johnson, Who Sets Wholesale Ratio at 2 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—NRA today ordered that retail food prices contain a 6 per cent and wholesale prices a 2 per cent allowance for actual wages of labor.

It was explained that this does not mean a corresponding increase in prices, but simply allocates the share of costs chargeable to labor.

The action was taken by Hugh S. Johnson, the NRA administrator, in fixing the allowances for wholesale and retail prices, which under the NRA code must not be below.

Since the food code went into effect there had been no regulation of labor costs, though the code prohibits sale below cost, including labor.

The mark-up, Johnson ordered, will be based on the invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, after deduction of all legitimate trade discounts, exclusive of cash discounts.

C. W. Smith, administration member of the National Food and Grocery Distributors' Code Authority, said the allowance had been requested by both chain and independent dealers.

The allowance will become effective March 31.

ORCHARD SOLD FOR $29,150

Third Attempt to Sell Illinois Property Succeeds.

PITTSFIELD, Ill., March 22.—The famous Caldwell Orchards at Valley City were sold at a recent court sale for $29,150. This was the third attempt to sell them by the court, former sales having been for such small amounts that the court refused to accept them.

The estate, which has been in the possession of the court for a year, consists of 700 acres of land, of which 600 are in bearing apple trees, and the large packing plant at Valley City. In ordinary times the property had a conservative value of $250,000.

A. Mitchell Palmer Ascertained Appeal to Stop Withdrawals Is Sufficient Reason.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—A. Mitchell Palmer, Attorney-General in the Wilson administration, told a House Banking subcommittee today the Government was obligated to pay depositors in closed banks, because it had been in "absolute control" of bank policies for the last several years.

Palmer said the Government also was obligated because of governmental appeals made a year and two years ago to the public to stop withdrawals and to leave deposits in banking institutions. He said that the appeal that went out was "an urgent reason" for passage of the McAdoo bill providing for governmental agents to purchase remaining assets of closed national banks, pay depositors in full and liquidate the assets over a 10-year period.

Palmer said that the third problem applies to methods of operation in the automobile plants that call for a very strict enforcement of discipline. To enforce this discipline, he said, "the companies have introduced many forms of espionage, such as spies, blacklists and secret service operators supplied through detective agencies."

The assembly line system of production he said demands "a grueling pace of operations."

10-YEAR CONTRACT OFFERED CITY BY UNION ELECTRIC

Proposal Would Cut Present Lighting Bill of $600,000 About $25,000 Annually.

Union Electric Light & Power Co. today submitted to the city Board of Estimate and Apportionment a proposal for a 10-year contract for all lighting current now purchased by the city from the company. Such a contract, the company said, would save the city $25,000 a year. The present annual cost of electricity for public lighting is more than $600,000.

In becoming one of the lucky ones in the ticket drawings, Sasse has the unique experience of twice within a few years drawing a ticket from a pool against overwhelming odds.

It also would put an end, for nearly 10 years, to discussion of a municipal plant for lighting streets and public buildings. A proposal for such a plant, to cost $700,000, was included in Mayor Dickmann's outline of a proposed new bond issue, but was struck out by the Ways and Means Committee of the Board of Aldermen, before the measure calling for a bond issue election was passed.

The Board of Estimate referred the proposal to Director Wall of the Department of Public Utilities. In Reply to Wall's Inquiry.

Wall recently inquired as to the possibility of a reduction in the rates paid by the city to Union Electric for lighting current. The letter to the Board of Estimate, signed by J. Boehm, vice-president of the company, was in response to this inquiry.

The letter states that the company now furnishes the city three classes of service. The first is under the street lighting contracts, expiring Dec. 31, 1938, and the cost to the city is stated at 1.1 cent a kilowatt hour. The second is for traffic signals, bridge lighting, park and alley lighting, and expires next May 1. The third is for buildings in the Plaza group and fire engine houses, the time of its termination not being stated.

"We are willing," Boehm wrote, "to enter into negotiations with the city for a 10-year period." The letter Saving at $35,000 a Year.

"We would be willing to cancel the street lighting contract and enter into the new combined contract for all three services, saving the city $25,000 a year. If the city desires to enter into a contract only for city buildings and traffic lights, and not street lighting, we may be able to give a substantial reduction on a 10-year basis."

The estimated cost of lighting streets, alleys and public places with electricity, and in some sections other illuminants, was $900,000 for the fiscal year ending next month. For the next fiscal year the estimate is $700,000, a reduction of $200,000. The reduction made through the replacement of gas and naphtha lights in outlying districts with electric lamps; also through the curtailing of lighting services on many streets.

Lighting public buildings cost $172,062 for this fiscal year, and the estimated cost for next year is $219,162, an increase of $47,100. In addition, lighting streets, boulevards and parks through the city lighting department cost $123,410 this year, and next year's estimate is $192,938, or an increase of $69,528.

SUBCOMMITTEE APPROVES MONETARY AUTHORITY BILL

Adds Silver Clause to Measure for Central Control of All Money.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—A House Banking Sub-Committee today approved the Goldborough bill for the establishment of a Federal monetary authority with sole control over the issuance of currency.

The measure was amended on motion of Representative Scruggham (Dem.), Nevada, to include a clause permitting the monetary authority to buy and sell silver so that the value of 37 1/4 grains of that metal will be equal to 23.22 grains of pure gold.

Chairman Goldborough (Dem.), Maryland, of the sub-committee said it had been agreed to ask the full committee to meet Monday to consider the revised bill.

Under the proposed measure, all existing authority to issue or reissue currency, except circulating notes of national banking associations, would be given to the monetary authority.

With officers standing about him, Shinsky showed them how he crept up to the Mumney house about 7:30 p.m.

He said he saw two shadowy figures in the dwelling and could not determine which was Mrs. Mumney. Then, he said, the woman's daughter, Truvella, came in with a lamp. A. J. Mumney, a boarder, to dress his injured foot. Shinsky said he fired. Shinsky was arrested yesterday.

Buono said the youth told him he was "hexed" by Mrs. Mumney while he was working on a farm adjoining hers. He related there was a dispute over ownership of the farm and charged that Mrs. Mumney "hexed" him the hope of regaining possession of the property.

Shinsky said that until that time he had been a hard-worker but that after the "spirit came out of the sky" and cast the spell on him he lost his vigor.

Shinsky said that twice every month he was unable to sleep and that on these occasions a huge black cat, with green eyes, appeared out of the darkness and tore at his sides.

He declared he was helpless to drive away the cat until he chanted three phrases recommended to him by a "hex pow-wow doctor" in Hazelton, Pa.

He said he had consulted seven "hex pow-wow doctors" but the one who gave him relief.

ASSOCIATE SAYS KENNEDY TOLD OF KILLING ABELNS

Prentice Trimble Quotes Man Under Arrest for Murder as Saying "I Had to Shoot Back."

GRAND JURY TO END INQUIRY TODAY

Father of 10 Children Now Denies That He Had Advance Knowledge of Holdup Plans.

Full admissions of their parts in the murder of Charles J. Abelns and Mrs. Abelns were made by Frank Kennedy and Arthur Schnett to Prentice C. Trimble, second State's witness in the case. Trimble told the police yesterday. His story agrees fully with that of Charles Douthitt, condemned for the armed robbery which occurred the murder of the chain store proprietor and his wife, a South Broadway early in the morning of Dec. 22 last.

All are prisoners, Kennedy, Schnett and Douthitt being charged with an armed robbery after the fact to murder. Kennedy, Schnett and Douthitt are former convicts. The grand jury is expected to finish its investigation of the case today.

Trimble clinched his claim to independence of the case yesterday afternoon, when he took city detectives to the Page Avenue apartment buildings along the thoroughfare doused them with buckets of water.

went to his aid and dispersed the crowd and arrested him.

For police action reported being attacked by demonstrators. Two required medical attention.

Four persons were injured when they were knocked down by two taxicabs driven on the sidewalk when the chauffeurs attempted to avoid a group of marchers in Seventh avenue and 135th street.

In Brooklyn two drivers were stopped, their cabs saturated with gasoline and set afire. Another was overturned. Two men were arrested as they ran from the scene.

Several men were taken from Park avenue when tenants of apartment buildings along the thoroughfare doused them with buckets of water.

Bullets Fired From Pistol. Seven diggers went with the detectives and diverted the 18-inch broadsword, making it possible to get out the buried weapon.

A search of the area before had been unsuccessful.

The bullet was found in a Remington 3-80, was taken to Police Headquarters and then was turned over to Tom Lewis, Police Department ballistics expert. The bullets taken from Abelns' body were declared by Lewis to have been fired from the pistol.

The license plates from the car used by Kennedy, Schnett and Douthitt were found Tuesday, by detectives guided by Trimble, in a car on Howard street where he had hidden them.

While Trimble was reported at one time to have admitted advance knowledge of the crime, he insisted yesterday that he knew nothing of it until after its occurrence, and the warrant against him charges only after-knowledge. In his statement yesterday, Trimble, an unemployed taxicab driver with a wife and 10 children, said nothing of any reward given or promised for his service in hiding the two vital pieces of evidence in the Abelns case. Presumably the others had little or nothing to give him, for they had fled without getting any part of the more than $2000 carried by Mr. and Mrs. Abelns.

Tells of Hiding Pistol. The afternoon of Dec. 22 or 23, Trimble said, "I was in Oscar Schnett's saloon at 1507 South Broadway, and I heard Arthur Douthitt and Kennedy quarreling. They were blaming each other for not getting the money. I heard enough to know what was being talked about the Abelns shooting, and when I talked to Kennedy myself, he admitted doing the shooting. The man shot at me and I had to shoot back," he said.

Then he said he had hidden his gun under the leaves in a park near Broadway and Osage street. I drove down to the place in my car, and he got the gun and gave it to me. We drove back to the saloon, talked with Arthur Schnett about getting rid of it.

Killed to See Car. Arthur boasted that he drove the young man to the place to pay for the meal and, after his companion went outside, Stathis tried to detain him. He drew the revolver in an effort to get away, he explained. Both young men were killed.

Young man who says he is 18 years old and living in Kennett, Mo., denied trying to hold up Stathis. He said he had no money to pay for the meal and, after his companion went outside, Stathis tried to detain him. He drew the revolver in an effort to get away, he explained. GOV. BALZAR OF NEVADA DIES; BOOSTER OF SILVER LAWS.

He Signed Both the Legalized Gambling and Six-Week Divorce Laws.

The Associated Press.

CARSON CITY, Nev., March 22.—Gov. Frederick Bennett, Balzar died here yesterday. He had been ill for several weeks.

The Governor, a Republican, was nearing the end of his second term as chief executive of Nevada, a position he won in the election of 1927 by defeating James G. Scrugham, the Democratic incumbent. He was 53 years old, a native of Virginia City, Nev. A mining man most of his life, Balzar had been active in efforts toward remonetization of silver.

Gov. Balzar signed both the legalized gambling and six-week divorce laws enacted by the State Legislature in 1931.

A characteristic Balzar speech was his address before the Republican National Convention in Chicago June 16, 1932, when, in speaking in behalf of his party's gubernatorial reelection plank for his party, the Governor said he was thankful he came from Nevada, "where men and women are glad of it." He concluded the address by shouting "Hurrah for Reno."

More Auto Tag Arrests. Thirty-one motorists were arrested yesterday for failure to have license tags. Fifty were booked Tuesday, when police began making arrests daily between noon and 2 p.m. The daily arrest period will continue throughout the week on Monday the final drive to force the license laws will begin.

Tenement Fire That Cost 7 Lives

One of a series of such fires in which 48 persons have perished in New York City since Jan. 1. This building, at 1905 Second Avenue, burned yesterday.

THEORY TENEMENT WAS FIRED TO KILL MURDER WITNESS

Those Who Lived in Building Called by State to Testify at Trial Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 22—Investigators of yesterday's tenement house fire in which seven lives were lost advanced the theory today that the fire was set with the intention of killing witnesses in a murder trial that comes up next week. One of the state's principal witnesses, a youth, lived in the building, but he escaped from the fire.

Joseph Maldanzo was stabbed to death last September in front of the tenement. The youth is an important witness against Colangelo Minetta, accused of the murder.

Mrs. Concetta Maldanzo, widow of the murdered man, said threats had been made against her life. "They threatened to hurt me if I took the witness stand," she said.

Twenty-five tenement fires in Brooklyn and Manhattan since Jan. 1 have cost 48 lives. Forty-four of the fatalities occurred in "Old Law" tenements, and 18 of the victims were children.

POLICE IN CAR CATCH TWO IN ATTEMPTED HOLDUP

Patrolmen, Attracted by Screens of Restaurant Keeper's Wife, Arrest Escaping Youths.

Patrolmen Boelling and Reeg, riding in a scout car at 11:30 o'clock last night, heard screams, saw a youth run out of a restaurant at 916 South Kingshighway and took him up in an automobile parked at the curb.

A woman dashed out of the restaurant after the youth, who got into the car and started to drive away with another young man when the officers halted them. A loaded revolver was found in the street.

Mrs. Harry Stathis, wife of the owner of the restaurant, said the young man tried to hold up her husband after failing to pay for a meal. When he drew a revolver she screamed. He ran out and she followed him to the curb.

The young man who says he is 18 years old and living in Kennett, Mo., denied trying to hold up Stathis. He said he had no money to pay for the meal and, after his companion went outside, Stathis tried to detain him. He drew the revolver in an effort to get away, he explained. SLAIN GANGSTER IDENTIFIED AS BOSS IN MANY MURDERS

Fred Goetz, Illinois U. Graduate, Said to Have Organized the Fred Burke Band of Killers.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, March 22.—The body of a man found Tuesday in a Cicero (Ill.) gutter was identified yesterday as that of Fred Goetz, 37 years old, college-educated gangster. He had been shot to death.

Fingerprints showed he was not J. George Zeigler, under which name he had been tentatively identified, but Goetz, one-time football-player at the University of Illinois, suspected participant not only in the St. Valentine's day killing of seven George (Bugs) Moran gangsters here, but in the machine gun murder of four officers and a convict, Frank Nash, at the Kansas City union station last June 17.

Pat Roche, former investigator for the State's Attorneys office, said Goetz was the organizer of the Fred Burke gang of killers.

There was a $5000 reward for the apprehension of Goetz for a Jefferson (Wis.) bank robbery. He was wanted also for killing Barney Hernandez, a chauffeur, during an attempted robbery of Dr. Henry R. Cross, who was held up in his automobile in front of his home in Chicago. Roger Bessner was arrested and confessed, naming Goetz as the mastermind of the robbery.

Goetz disappeared from the underworld and that of Zeigler operated in its place. Once he was arrested on a statutory charge, but he forfeited $5000 bond and his identity remained undisclosed.

Even after gangster enemies shot him, he might have escaped identification in death if it had not been for a $1000 bill found in his wallet. That led to the suspicion that he was a gangster.

Among his possessions were proxies for United States Steel Corporation shares made out in the names of Floyd C. Zeigler and Mrs. Zeigler.

SLAIN DUQUOIN WOMAN
STABBED SIX TIMES

Autopsy Performed After Finding of Victim in Shallow Grave.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
DU QUOIN, Ill., March 22.—An examination of the body of Mrs. Leatha Greathouse, 38 years old, a divorcee, found partly buried in a crude grave near her home yesterday, has disclosed six stab wounds.

Dr. J. W. Stevens reported one was on the right side of the neck and five were on the left side of the chest. The heart had been pierced. An inquest was ordered tonight by Coroner Schlepper.

After questioning the woman's son, Raleigh, age 15, told officers his father, Earl Greathouse, left town two weeks before Mrs. Greathouse's disappearance on Jan. 16. Greathouse returned after his son had written him of the disappearance.

The woman's body was found by Sam Vitale of Du Quoin. He told Sheriff Albert Davis the woman was buried in a grave about six inches deep, with a part of her body protruding. Three tubs had been placed over the grave.

When Mrs. Greathouse left home Jan. 16, she told her son she would "be back soon." Her former husband told authorities he was in Carbon Hill, Ala. at the time of her disappearance, and returned here to aid in the search for her.

Mrs. Greathouse was the daughter of Mrs. Margaret Marti, 5875 Greer avenue, who left for Du Quoin last night, where she formerly lived.

Three Holdup Men Seize $10,000 at St. Cloud and Escape Into Swamp.

By the Associated Press.

ST. CLOUD, Fla., March 22.—Three unmasked men rode up to the Citizens' State Bank here yesterday in a blue coupe with an Indiana license tag, told their victims they were members of the Dillinger gang, seized about $10,000 in currency and fled into the swamps of Central Florida.

Armed with machine guns, the three ordered Miss Edna Godwin, a teller, and three customers to lie on the floor, and then compelled P. E. Kirkpatrick, cashier, to open the vault and hand out all cash and securities.

Kirkpatrick said that later he looked at a picture of the man who escaped from the Crown Point (Ind.) jail recently, and one of the three resembled the desperado.

WALLACE PROPOSES MILK CONTROL PLAN

Suggests 15 Pct. Cut in Butterfat Production and Redistribution of Cows.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, March 22.—A four-point program designed to cut dairy production down to consumption requirements and to increase the income of dairy farmers proposed to the industry. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Chester C. Davis, Farm Administrator.

The plan calls for benefit payment of 40 cents a pound on a 15 per cent reduction of butterfat production under each farmer's 1932-33 output.

It also would appropriate at least $1,000,000 for the distribution of surplus milk to underfed children in cities; allocate $5,000,000 for distribution of cows to farm families in deficient areas, and use $5,000,000 for purchasing and destroying cows affected with tuberculosis and Bang's disease, or the disease that is transmissible to human beings as undulant fever.

Total cost of the program is estimated at $165,000,000, with the possibility that it might reach $300,000,000.

It would be financed by a processing tax starting at one cent a pound on butterfat, and advanced to 5 cents a pound as production is brought under control.

Officials said the processing tax of 5 cents a pound on butterfat, coupled with the 15 per cent production reduction, probably would mean an increase of about 5 cents a ounce for butter and about half a cent a quart for milk. It was added that part or all of this tax might be taken out of distributors and processors' margins instead of being added on to consumers.

A national conference of cooperative milk producers met here today. In an advance statement members of the conference opposed the general policy of milk marketing agreements. Attacks on the control plan are expected later.

FOUND DEAD IN FIELD

MRS. GOLDIE PRUSS.

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO, THEORY IN COUNTY DEATH

Body of Mrs. Goldie Pruss, Who Slipped Away From Old Folks' Home, Found in Field.

Mrs. Goldie Pruss, who wandered away Monday afternoon from the Jewish Orthodox Old Folks' Home, 1438 East Grand avenue, was found dead yesterday in a field between Bellefontaine road and State Highway No. 99, in the northern part of St. Louis County.

Her neck and back were broken, there were bruises on her head, her clothes were muddy and one of her shoes was missing.

Constable Rudy Baumer of St. Ferdinand Township told reporters he thought she had been hit by an automobile; that the driver started to take her to a hospital, but, discovering she was dead, placed the body where it was found.

Mrs. Pruss, who was 65 years old, had been a resident of the home for almost three years, as had her husband, Meyer, 73. She had slipped away from the home recently because she wanted to be near a son, Jacob Pruss, 1354 Bayard avenue, a daughter, Mrs. Eva Grossman, 5023 St. Louis avenue. Survivors include two other daughters, Mrs. Annie Meyer of Albuquerque, N. M., and Mrs. Yetta Meyer, Amarillo, Tex.

The body was found by Emil, 9-year-old son of Frank Farras, on his father's farm, north of Chambers road. It was in a field 300 yards west of the Farras home, and about 100 yards from an unpaved road between the Bellefontaine and Chambers roads.

University City police found Mrs. Pruss walking on Olive street road at Grant avenue, west of North and South road, last Nov. 16, and took her back to the home.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must wash your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you 99 per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for "almond oil" to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that youthful glow which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

TELLS OF FEDERAL METHODS OF FINANCING HOME LOANS

W. H. Newton of Washington Addresses Building Association League at Dinner.

Walter H. Newton of Washington, member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, described the Government's plans to aid home owners through Federal financing agencies at a dinner of the St. Louis League of Incorporated Building and Loan Associations last night at Hotel Statler.

The Government, he said, was seeking to make mortgage borrowing economical for home owners and mortgage lending safe for investors through such agencies as the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Home Loan Bank System and Federal savings and loan associations.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation had financed more than 100,000 home loans, he said, and had saved about 500,000 other home owners from foreclosure. The Home Loan Bank System, he said, had about 2300 members, virtually all of them building and loan associations with resources totaling almost 40 per cent of the resources of all building and loan associations in the country. Federal savings and loan associations, numbering about 200, he described as offering home financing in communities where other agencies were unable to meet requirements.

The actress died yesterday afternoon at Doctors' Hospital after an emergency operation. Physicians said she suffered from an advanced menses condition.

She was 34 years old and until about the last she had been busy in her profession. Her latest release, "Wine, Women and Song," was seen at the same time Tuesday. On March 8 she appeared before the camera for the last time, completing "Frankie and Johnnie," in which she acted the role of Nellie Bly.

Hollywood was shocked by the death of the actress, who got her start at the age of 17 when Florenziegfeld saw her drinking tea in a Broadway restaurant with some school girl chums and drafted her as his "Follies."

Edmund Lowe, her actor-husband, was at her bedside when she died.

Miss Tashman, constantly traveling between Hollywood, where she worked energetically in the pictures, and New York, where she became famous also as a designer of exotic gowns, became ill more than a year ago. In October, 1932, she suffered from acute appendicitis and after an operation never regained her health fully.

Miss Tashman started out to be a school teacher. After finishing high school, she enrolled at Hunter College in Manhattan. She had been there three years when she was engaged by Ziegfeld.

She designed the dresses she wore in "Wine, Women and Song," a picture different from anything in which she had appeared. No longer a girl lad of the screen, she became in the play a mother, who sacrificed everything, including life, for her daughter.

Didn't Talk About Clothes.

Although she devoted much attention to clothes, and frequently paraded the fashion-minded of Hollywood with her designs, far in advance of the modes, Lilian Tashman declared she never talked about clothes unless asked about them.

But women who talked gowns were as boring as men who talked nothing but golf. Black was one of her "smartest" colors, but she also favored white, gray and beige. Simple and striking coiffures and unusual millinery were always expected of her by Hollywood.

On more than one occasion she was a principal style controversialist, challenging brittle compliances with Heddle Horner, another overland style authority, and various other "best-dressed women."

But those close to her said always that style was but a side issue with her. Her real ambition was to be a successful actress. She was in demand for "hard-boiled" and "worldly woman" characterizations, and appeared in such roles in many films, including "The Trial of Mary Dugan," "Gold Diggers of Broadway," "Puttin' on the Ritz," "Girls About Town," "Too Much Harmony."

NEW SMOKE BILL DEFERRED AFTER PUBLIC HEARING

Discussion Before Aldermanic Committee Centers on Administering City's Regulations.

The question of administering the city's smoke regulations was the principal point of controversy yesterday at a public hearing before the Public Safety Committee of the Board of Aldermen on a bill to create a new city smoke department and provide more stringent regulations.

Following the hearing, which was attended by about 75 persons, the committee took the bill under advisement.

Proponents of the measure, which was drafted by a committee of city officials and citizens appointed by Mayor Dickmann and headed by Prof. Raymond Tucker of Washington University, contended enforcement of the bill was necessary for the public health and to prevent a further exodus of tax-paying citizens from the city to St. Louis County to escape the smoke nuisance that prevails in the city most of the winter.

Prof. Tucker, principal speaker for the bill, answered opponents of the measure who contended the existing smoke ordinance was sufficient if properly enforced, by stating that he was confident the new smoke ordinance would be properly enforced and that to assume it would not be would be a "false premise."

"Some Administration Needed."

A. C. Hecker favored abatement of smoke, but said that what the city needed was not "more smoke legislation but a saner and more effective administration of what we've got now."

Harry E. Kline, business agent of the operating engineers' union, thinks the whole problem centers on the proper enforcement of the present smoke laws. "The trouble is," declared Kline, "that the city has been sending a lot of smoke inspectors around who are nothing but barbers and bartenders and don't know the first thing about engineering. Not long ago one of them came into my place and I gave him a shovel and told him to show me how to fire the boiler. He couldn't do it because he didn't know how."

In reply Prof. Tucker said the provisions of the new bill made it impossible for anyone to obtain a position as a city smoke inspector unless qualified for the job, and added, "I am naive enough to believe that we have a new deal in our local government as well as our national government and the officials are trying to do what is right about smoke and everything else."

Modeled After Other Cities' Laws.

Prior to his defense of points raised by opponents, Prof. Tucker declared the new bill was not "a figment of the imagination of the theorist but a combination of the practical with the theoretical, and that it was modeled after smoke ordinances in a number of cities throughout the country."

"The provisions are strict but not so strict as to make it impossible for anyone to adhere to them," said Prof. Tucker.

He outlined the provisions of the bill which creates a new city smoke department under direction of a commissioner and with about 20 inspectors. The present smoke department is combined with the boiler and elevator inspection departments. The bill also provides, as does the present ordinance, for the sealing of heating apparatus in homes and industrial plants in event of repeated violations of the law by permitting emission of dense smoke.

James E. King, chairman of the clean air committee of the General Council on Civic Needs, urged adoption of the bill.

Mrs. F. B. Clark, declaring she represented the women of St. Louis, spoke of the smoke problem as it affects the housewife. "All winter long, our dresses are dirty, our curtains are covered with soot, the health of our children and of ourselves is endangered by breathing smoky air and it is about time we got rid of smoke," she said.

Smoke League for New Bill.

Paul Bakewell, representing the Citizens' Smoke Abatement League, said smoke was one of the few drawbacks to living in St. Louis "and perhaps its greatest." He urged prompt approval of the bill. Col. Frank Miller, State engineer for the Federal Emergency Public Works Administration, also urged approval of the bill, declaring that if residents continued to move from the city to the county the city would soon be unable to collect taxes enough to operate the city government. "This is my first winter in St. Louis," said Col. Miller, "and I have had a cold ever since I came here. If I am here another winter I am certainly going to move out into the county."

P. S. Trowbridge, representing the Manufacturers' and Merchants' Association, presented a formal statement to the committee opposing the bill on the ground that the present ordinance was a fair one as far as industry was concerned and it was unnecessary to change it. Also, he objected to the provision that fees be charged for each inspection and to the provision for sealing of heating apparatus for repeated violations.

Other speakers declared the real rub of the smoke problem was East St. Louis, but Prof. Tucker answered this by saying that Weather Bureau tests showed that there was

A cold is no joke and Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine treats it as none. It goes right to the seat of the trouble, an infection within the system. Surface remedies are largely makeshift.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is speedy and effective because it is expressly a cold remedy and because it is direct and internal—and COMPLETE! It does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. That's the treatment a cold requires and anything less is losing chances. When you feel a cold coming on get busy at once with Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. For sale by all druggists, 30c and 50c. SMITH REYNOLDS ESTATE MUST BE DIVIDED UP AGAIN

North Carolina Supreme Court Rejects Agreement to Give $15,000,000 to Charity.

RIGHTS OF CHILD BY FIRST WIFE CITED

Pre-Divorce Pact, Validity of Minor's Will at Issue —Libby Holman's Baby Affected.

By the Associated Press.

RALEIGH, N.C., March 22.—The State Supreme Court yesterday held invalid a family agreement for settlement of the $25,000,000 estate of Smith Reynolds, but failed to rule how the tobacco heir's fortune should be shared by his two children, Anne Cannon Reynolds, a daughter by his first wife, and Zachary Smith Reynolds, an infant son by his second wife, Libby Holman, the Broadway singer.

The effect of the decision was to throw the case back into the lower courts for settlement of at least two vital points.

First—the validity of a will made in New York by young Reynolds soon after his first wife, formerly Anne Cannon, obtained a Reno divorce, and shortly before he married Miss Holman, then a revue singer in New York.

Second—the status of a pre-divorce agreement, under which Anne Cannon Reynolds and her infant daughter received $300,000 each in consideration of their renouncing all further claims to the tobacco fortune.

If Agreement Stands.

Should this agreement, recorded in Forsyth (Winston-Salem) County Superior Court, be allowed to stand, the court said Little Libby Holman's baby, now a little more than a year old, would be entitled to the entire fortune.

However, the court expressed the opinion that the agreement was invalid, in so far as it related to Anne Cannon Reynolds, the second, on the ground that an infant's inheritance rights could not be signed away.

Young Reynolds was found shot to death in the family's home at Winston-Salem, July 6, 1932, after a drinking party. A coroner's jury found that he came to his death at the hands of parties unknown, and later a grand jury indicted Libby Holman and Ab Walker, the latter a long-time friend of Smith. The charge was dropped, however, for lack of evidence.

Three Families Agreed.

Negotiations were started to provide for the disposal of young Reynolds' property, left in trust for him by his father, R. J. Reynolds, the tobacco magnate.

After Libby Holman's baby was born in Philadelphia early last year, an announcement was made that the Reynolds, Cannon and Holman families had agreed to divide $5,000,000 equally between the two wives and their children, and that the remainder, estimated at $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, should be used for the establishment of a charitable foundation in North Carolina.

The arrangement was attained by the Cahnus Bank & Trust Co. of Concord, N.C., which had been named co-guardian of Anne Cannon Reynolds, the second, with the child's grandmother, Mrs. Laura Cannon, wife of Joe F. Cannon, millionaire towel manufacturer.

Bank Acted Alone.

Charles A. Cannon of Concord, a brother of Joe F. Cannon, is president of the bank. Mrs. Laura Cannon, Joe F. Cannon and all members of the Reynolds family told Superior Court Judge Wilson Warlick that they approved the settlement and were not in sympathy with the action of the young Reynolds' first wife, now Mrs. Brandon Smith of Charlotte, also gave her approval, and Judge Warlick issued an order confirming the agreement, and by implication, sanctioning the Forsyth settlement, while disregarding the New York will.

It was this decision that the Supreme Court overturned. The Justices set forth that settlement of the estate was not a matter for a family agreement but one to be decided by the courts; that if the Forsyth agreement were not set aside, Libby Holman's child would receive the entire estate, provided the New York will is sustained; that the New York will "appears to be inoperative and void" because Reynolds was a minor; and that Judge Warlick should have ruled the Forsyth agreement null and void.

Regarding the purported renunciation of Baby Anne Cannon Reynolds' rights in the pre-divorce agreement, the Court said it "deprives" her of "some $12,000,000."

"Courts of equity look with jealousy upon contracts that affect the material rights of infants," the decision remarked.

Young Reynolds' will, found in a New York safe deposit box, left the bulk of his property to his brother, R. J. Reynolds Jr., and two sisters, but made bequests of $50,000 each to his divorced wife and her baby and to other relatives.

THERE are just about three common-sense questions to ask about pipe tobacco:

"Is it cut in big enough flakes to smoke cool and mild?"

"Does it have a pleasing flavor that leaves you hankering for more?"

"I guess I've been smoking pipes for as many years as you've been born, and when it comes to pipe tobacco... here it is in a nutshell. Smoke Granger."

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—Anthony Ziernicki was freed, but his son, Ozelow, was sentenced to 3 to 10 years in prison yesterday after State Banking Department officials testified they found shortages amounting to $16,981 in a building and loan association's books. Both men were officers of the association, but the elder Ziernicki left most of the bookkeeping to the son.

By the Associated Press

VIENNA, March 22.—The first definite admission that the Austrian republic is dead was contained today in an official Government gazette, which said the Cabinet was still discussing details of a new Constitution but had decided that the word "Republic" shall not appear in it.

Austria in the future will be referred to as "The Federal State of Austria" or simply as "Austria" the gazette said.

Wilhelm Miklas still holds the office of President but the gazette does not mention this detail. It itself, "President" of Austria is a title, not necessarily implying the existence of a republic.

Further preparing the way for a new state, the Government today began taking a census, particularly requiring information of previous military service, whether in the old imperial army forces or the militia and home guard groups of new Austria.

Information regarding sports training and physical handicaps was also demanded of all male citizens between the ages of 14 and 60. Special orange colored blanks were provided for this information, which was kept separate from regular census data.

It was pointed out that these blanks could be used to make new recruiting lists replacing those destroyed when Austria was disbanded by peace treaties.

By the Associated Press
DUBLIN, March 22.—President Eamon de Valera, incensed at the Irish Free State Senate's rejection of a bill to prevent the wearing of political uniforms, introduced a bill in the Dail, or lower house, today to abolish the Senate.

The Dail at once passed the bill on first reading.

Describing the Senate as "a menace to the country," the President said the Government "for a long time has considered abolishing it."

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 22. Nine cities with a population of 900,000 have signed contracts to purchase electricity from the Tennessee Valley Authority, David E. Lilienthal, director in charge of power, has announced.

Tupelo, Miss., the first city to sign for TVA power, is now being served with low-cost electricity from Muscle Shoals. Knoxville, another customer of the TVA, is making plans to build a distributing system.

Other cities with which contracts have been signed are Decatur, Florence, Sheffield, Tuscaloosa and Russellville in Alabama; Pulaski, Tenn., and Amory, Miss.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Founded by JOSEPH PULITZER

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

JOSEPH PULITZER.

April 10, 1907.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

For Municipal Ownership.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MUNICIPAL ownership of public utilities is "in the air" everywhere. The Inslu debacle has given notice of an impetus to the cause—more so than years of talk and talk could have done. The public, long a victim of recklessness via the venality of subsidiaries, affiliates, holding companies, et al., is at last realizing how it has been robbed all these years—the victim of its own insane apathy—and is rising in its might, determined to get what's coming to it.

No tenable argument can be adduced against a city's ownership of those prime necessities, water, gas and electricity. An authentic record of 10 large cities owning their electric light and power plants close the amazing fact that this everyday necessity is costing its users there only 20 per cent of what they formerly paid when this utility was under private ownership. Could anything be more convincing? It has been officially stated that the Government-owned plant at Muscle Shoals can produce electric current at a cost of one and three-eighths mills per kilowatt hour. Mr. Consumer, the country over, is probably paying an average of 50 times that much, a tribute to the inevitable greed of the privately-owned utility companies. Is it any wonder that Inslu shares of $100 per value were greedily snapped up at $600 to $700 before the crash?

Disregarding all this for the moment, the present financial predicament of our Public Service Co. seems to afford a golden opportunity for municipal ownership. If San Francisco, with its steep street grades and a much smaller population than St. Louis, is operating its street car system profitably on a 5-cent fare—meeting all its bona fide obligations promptly without cutting back its working force, surely this could be done here, with our lighter grades and a larger population that is seemingly reconciled to a 10-cent fare.

W. H. B.

From Where He Sits.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

FROM where this commentator sits, it looks—

As if the country is confronted by the stern necessity of creating somewhere between 15,000,000 and 20,000,000 brand new and permanent jobs at living wages or better;

As if the production-for-profit-in-competition system, under which most of the peoples of the world have staggered through the years, can no longer provide enough jobs to go around more than partly, no matter how we patch it up and coax it to work some more;

As if, as therefore, we should be getting along with the inevitable business of "facturing the music," of wrecking the entire structure of production-for-profit-in-competition and rebuilding on the logical basis of production-for-social requirements—with a goal more creditable for the ambitious than the accustomed one of becoming the biggest hog at the trough.

EDWARD O'FALLON JR.

Louisville, Ky.

A Musical Atrocity.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

T HE writer attended the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's concert last Saturday evening, and I was pleased to note that the last number on the program was "La Valse" by Maurice Ravel, author of the well-known "Bolero."

I fondly hoped that "La Valse" would be of the same caliber as "Bolero," but in this hope I was sadly disappointed.

The piece opens up with strange groping sounds, the volume then increasing to such an extent it sounded like an artillery duel or a madhouse; terrific discord predominating. Lover of volume that I am, this uproar was too much, and in vain I wished for a pair of ear-muffs.

This was one critic's opinion. Mr. Golschmann or the orchestra for playing "La Valse," for I realize this is a demand from some patrons for modern pieces, but rather to extend my appreciation, as an occasional listener, that such atrocities are so seldom played.

Half-Truths and Partisanship.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

N A tiff with Senator Lewis of Illinois the other day, Senator Fess said that the army air mail fatalities would not have occurred if Mr. Brown had still been Postmaster-General. That statement is typical of the partisan politician, who seldom states the whole truth if a half-truth will suit his purpose better. Senator Fess might better have said that the fatalities would not have happened if Mr. Brown had never been made Postmaster-General.

This same logic applies to the rantings of J. M. Beck, his fears for the safety of the Constitution and his dread of a "dictatorship." If the crowd Mr. Beck appeals to had not grown so adept at side-stepping the spirit of the Constitution, through permitting the big-money plunbers to grab everything that was not nailed down, including the shirts off the workers' backs and the very bread out of the mouths of poor women and children, we would not now have need of a "dearborn, debonair 'dictator'" to feed the hungry and to arouse that hope that had turned to despair. We now have a President of the whole people, and that is both constitutional and refreshing.

DEMOCRACY.

THE AUTO INDUSTRY'S OPPORTUNITY.

Within the span of a generation the automobile industry, starting from scratch, has become a giant. Its story is, industrially, the great American romance. In the writing of it we have all collaborated. The American people have taxed themselves joyfully to provide the roads without which the automobile could never have attained its present status. The people are taxing themselves today in that same cause, with scarcely a trace of lessening zeal. With all respect for the productive and technical genius developed in motordom, the people, as a whole, have a substantial equity in the automobile business. The relationship, in a sense, may be described as a partnership.

What obligations such a partnership imposes upon the heads of that industry is, it seems to us, a pertinent question. Certainly an industry so closely identified with the popular economic welfare cannot afford to jeopardize that welfare. Viewed in the coldest light of business, the automobile industry is obliged by selfish consideration to do everything within its power to promote and stabilize mass prosperity. It is obligated, not through humanitarianism but by self-interest, to join heartily in the Roosevelt administration's paramount purpose to establish a soundly balanced economy, which means that labor is to have a larger share in the profits of industry and capital a necessary smaller share.

The New Deal means many things, but across the top of the page write higher wages and shorter hours.

Once the New Deal of higher wages and shorter hours is in full swing, the automobile industry, we should think, will be the greatest beneficiary. Since the automobile arrived, it has been every normal person's ambition to have one. That is as true today, we believe, as at any time in the past. The automobile market in the United States is limited only by capacity to buy. It has often been said that the majority of people driving automobiles cannot afford to do it. Be that as it may, they are driving them, and they will continue to drive them, in increasing numbers, as their buying power increases.

"They," of course, means all the people, in all the trades, industries, professions and occupations on the economic map. Given a general wage scale, such as the New Deal contemplates, along with the larger leisure of the shorter work day, and the automobile will sing a song that will reduce its peans of former triumphs to lisping pratfalls.

Well, how is this wage scale to be brought about?

How is the shorter day to be put on the calendar? Surely the Government cannot step in and say what everybody shall be paid and how many hours he shall work. That is something labor and capital must mutually accomplish for their mutual profit. Can labor possibly meet capital in terms of negotiable equality unless like capital, it is organized? Experience answers the question. Labor must organize as capital has organized. The Government, recognizing that fact, has legally authorized labor to organize as it elects to do. The Government prescribes no form of organization for labor. Neither does it permit capital, or the employer, to dictate the kind of organization its employees must select. The Government has given labor a free hand. It has told capital to keep hands off.

Industry has not, as a whole, accepted and complied with the law giving labor the right of collective bargaining through representatives of its own choosing. The automobile industry has not accepted and complied with that law. Yet, it is by such collective bargaining, and only by such, that labor can successfully negotiate with industry. It is by such collective bargaining that the age-long "riddle of the want and wage" can be justly solved. With that solution we shall see a new scroll of prosperity, with the automobile industry, like Abou Ben Adhem's name, leading all the rest.

For the automobile industry, then, to stand behind Section 7A of the National Industrial Recovery Act is more than an obligation. It is an opportunity to provide an electrifying example of leadership in hastening the day of higher wages, shorter hours, a real, all-inclusive prosperity. It is an opportunity, too, which the reviving automobile industry, with its extraordinary skill and vast resources, is robustly equipped to meet.

PRETTY SLICK, PROFESSOR.

Prof. Hoop was addressing his class at Tulsa, Okla. He was telling them, with the cocksureness of the congenital professor, all about politics. He said: "A man can't win in politics without a machine."

Not a student blinked an eye, but, still, there was a tension of unbelief in the class room. Stung to the quick that a statement of his should be doubted, the professor resumed: "I'll prove it. I shall run for the Democratic nomination for Police Commissioner, and watch them"—pausing to smile wryly at his yet unspoken witicism—"watch them roll your Hoop!"

The professor ran. Did the machine roll him? Why, the Tulsa Tammany, or whatever it is they have down there, rallied around his banner. With buttonholing and cheers and eloquent speeches and all the fine arts a political machine employs in turning out its miracles, they said Hoop was their hope, and they nominated him.

There may be a moral in this. Anyhow, on second thought, we should say this professor is a pretty slick politician.

A WAR SCARE DEBUNKED.

Japan, Russia and various other countries may be energetically preparing for war, but the heavy movements of Chilean nitrates through the Panama Canal scarcely proves the point. True, there have been huge shipments of this ingredient of high explosives going through the canal. One estimate makes the increase 700 per cent over the shipments of the same period last year. A glance at the world map, however, will show that Japan must be left out of any war scare inspired by this fact. Unless nitrate shippers are becoming subtle and sending their cargoes off in a deceptive direction, goods bound from Chile to Japan simply would not go by way of the canal.

Mr. Golschmann, the critic, Mr. Golschmann or the orchestra for playing "La Valse," for I realize this is a demand from some patrons for modern pieces, but rather to extend my appreciation, as an occasional listener, that such atrocities are so seldom played.

WILL WE IMPORT THE SIESTA?

Up in Wisconsin, a State renowned for new ideas, the medical authorities are advising business men to take a mid-day nap. It is, so they say, an elixir. With mid-day rest, one feels better and lives longer. Our old friend, Ponce de Leon, went far astray for a recipe he might have applied at home.

Did we suggest it was a new idea? It is as old, we suppose, as the Pharaohs. It is religiously observed in France, where business halts for two or three hours in mid-day while everyone regales himself with food, wine and a snooze. The Spanish have a name for it—siesta, and their Mexican cousins practice it and find it good. Yes, and the poets have sung it as an excellent way to dream dreams and see visions.

In this country, however, we have regarded the siesta as sheer indolence, fitted only for wine bibbers who find it necessary to sleep off the effects. Perhaps, in the light of the new leisure which the depression has forced on what was once a nation devoted to go-getterism, we shall take a new attitude toward the mid-day nap. And a last word: Don't forget that John D. Sr., in the days when he was compiling his first billion dollars, always permitted himself forty winks after lunch.

cessful competition with the artificial product remains slight.

With the nitrate war scare thus thoroughly debunked, our war predictors are practically forced to exercise their talents in other fields.

FOR ACTION ON THE WORLD COURT.

If there is the slightest doubt in any Senator's mind about whether American public opinion favors adherence to the World Court, it should be dissolved tomorrow at the hearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The remarkable array of participating organizations ought to be enough to convince anyone that the time has come to end all delay and equivocation in this important matter.

What obligations such a partnership imposes upon the heads of that industry is, it seems to us, a pertinent question. Certainly an industry so closely identified with the popular economic welfare cannot afford to jeopardize that welfare. Viewed in the coldest light of business, the automobile industry is obliged by selfish consideration to do everything within its power to promote and stabilize mass prosperity. It is obligated, not through humanitarianism but by self-interest, to join heartily in the Roosevelt administration's paramount purpose to establish a soundly balanced economy, which means that labor is to have a larger share in the profits of industry and capital a necessary smaller share.

The New Deal means many things, but across the top of the page write higher wages and shorter hours.

Since the automobile arrived, it has been every normal person's ambition to have one. That is as true today, we believe, as at any time in the past. The automobile market in the United States is limited only by capacity to buy. It has often been said that the majority of people driving automobiles cannot afford to do it. Be that as it may, they are driving them, and they will continue to drive them, in increasing numbers, as their buying power increases.

Numerous other organizations which will testify for ratification of the pending treaties include the National Education Association, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, Central Conference of American Rabbis, Catholic Association for International Peace, League of Women Voters, American Association of University Women, Women's Trade Union League and the National Grange. Still further support will be brought by the representatives of more than 100 World Court committees over the country, including Forrest C. Donnell of St. Louis.

In face of the long-standing state of the public mind, the isolationist course of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee during the past decade has been nothing short of a disgrace. But with those die-hards who were responsible for pigeon-holing the treaties—such reactionaries as former Senators Moses and Watson—repudiated and retired from public life, there is now no reason whatever for continuing the unhappy status quo. The Roosevelt administration has broken with the foreign policy of recent years in the recognition of Soviet Russia and in the New Deal in our relations with our Latin American neighbors. Approval of the World Court treaties should follow as a matter of course.

A recent poll of the Senate, made public by the Associated Press, shows that, with 15 members unreported, more than two-thirds of the Senate membership favors ratification. This in itself is sufficient to require the Foreign Relations Committee to report the protocol to the floor. Chairman Pittman and his associates cannot do otherwise unless they want to make their committee one with the Old Deal bittersweeters who have so humiliated us in the past.

And once the question of adherence to the World Court is out of committee, a generation's fight for participation in an enlightened instrument in world affairs will be won. Make no mistake about that.

JUDGE FARIS ON THE DRUG TRAFFIC.

In paroling a Negro drug peddler who has given information to inspectors, Federal Judge Faris said:

I am convinced we are not getting anywhere picking up dollar-a-grain peddlers on street corners. Something should be done about the situation and that, of course, is a matter for Congress. The only way we can make any headway under the law is to cut off the source of supply—to get the big fellows.

The Harrison Law has been in operation since 1914 and, instead of resulting in decreasing the supply of narcotics, its effect has been to increase it. Narcotics are entering this country by the ton and the utmost vigilance on the part of authorities is powerless to stop the traffic.

This is because there are tremendous profits involved. An ounce of morphine, in ordinary commerce worth about $15, sells in the bootleg trade for about $450. Besides being much more profitable than bootlegging liquor, traffic in drugs is more easily hidden. Judge Faris did not tell Congress what it should do. He has been a fugitive since that time. Bergdoll, from his refuge in Germany, is appealing to the President for a pardon, but it is our view that public opinion will not favor his plea.

The Political Tide

N MANY minds, the question has arisen

whether the air mail blunder marks the return of the political tide. Naturally, among partisans, Republicans, the wish is father to the thought, and there is some satisfaction that they are losing visitors in which the popularity of Lindbergh is to be used to neutralize the popularity of the President. There is not, I believe, much substance to this.

The air mail fiasco, it is true, has hurt the administration: it has impaired the legend of its infallibility among many who were disposed to regard its every act as inspired. But that legend was always rather a doubtful asset. It caused the people to expect too much; it caused the Washington officials to be over-confident. Perhaps then it is just as well to be done with it, and to move on to the more prosaic level of ordinary government.

Apart from the loss of some of his public prestige, the affair of the mail should not have deep and lasting consequences on the political fortunes of the President. The public is certain to conclude that the error was due to an excess of zeal and that no sinister purpose was involved. That is easier to forgive than its opposite, the excessive complacency, for example, with which the Coolidge administration regarded the scandals of the Harding regime. It will not be easy to make very much political capital out of a patently honest mistake.

Nor is it the kind of mistake which could easily be blamed on the party

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, March 22. The President has started a secret investigation of banks controlled by power interests. The inquiry is nation-wide, and among the banks being scrutinized is one of the largest in the Capital. A select staff of Government agents is doing the job.

The purpose of the survey is to ascertain whether a conspiracy is on foot by power interests, fiercely resentful of the administration, to sabotage recovery efforts by preventing the banks of big and small banks they control from extending credit to industry and business.

Evidence to this effect was laid before Roosevelt, and he promptly ordered the investigation. Whether the President will make public the disclosures, if any, or turn the information over to the Senate Bank Investigating Committee for further action, is undetermined.

Buy Man.

DOLF A. BERLE JR., is one of the busiest men in the country. Between the Brain Trust in Washington and La Guardia's Cabinet in New York, he commutes regularly. His days, and most of his nights, are filled.

The young economist does not complain. But he has his worries. Here is his latest:

One of his students at Columbia, where Berle is a professor of law, demanded: "When are you going to mark those examination papers ours? You have had them over a month now."

"I'm awfully sorry," Berle answered. "But you see I have so many things to do. And just at present President Roosevelt has asked me to tackle a certain job for him, and I'm rushed more than ever."

"Yeah," was the skeptical retort. "Well, why don't you arrange with the President so that he'll mark our papers while you do his work?"

Preparations.

THE entire Federal Emergency Relief Administration is being quietly organized in anticipation of a big up-spirited in relief demands when the CWA is dismantled.

Administrator Harry Hopkins is not saying anything about it, but the plain fact is that since the plain fact is that since the administration launched its program of gradually disbanding CWA, calls for relief have increased by leaps and bounds. Absorption by private industry so far has absolutely failed to materialize. CWA workers who have obtained other jobs are negligible in number.

Many in the capital already have begun the refrain: "I told you so." They warn that unless the CWA is continued, the anticipated business upturn this spring may fall of full realization.

Odds and Ends.

RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD, President Roosevelt's latest "Ambassador at Large," was close friend of President Harding, and an equally good friend of President Coolidge, whom he warmly supported for election in 1924... unlike Norman Davis, the other Ambassador at Large," who is

Two years later a resolution, proposing an amendment to the Constitution which would prevent further taxation of government securities, passed the House, but failed in the Senate. By that time the 10 billion had grown to more than 12. In his book, "Taxation: the People's Business," published in 1924, Mr. Mellon wrote that tax exemption continued to be "an open invitation to all men who have wealth to be relieved from taxation."

Since Mr. Mellon's attempt to change the system, much has happened to make conditions worse. The debts of state and local governments, all exempt from income taxation, grew from four billions in 1912 to nine billions in 1922, and to about 17 billions at the present time.

Evans Clark estimated, in his "Internal Debts of the United States," that the sum of securities wholly exempt from Federal taxation in 1932 was 26 billions, not including 12 billions of Federal bonds which are exempt from the normal tax only. Since Mr. Clark made his calculations, the Washington Government has plunged into the huge experiments which entail the borrowing of 10 billions more.

After 1918, the states, hastening to complete programs which had been interfered with by the war, found borrowing easy. In prosperous years, wealth was eager to put its surplus where it would be safe and yield free from taxation.

The combination of eager borrower and willing lender led to the piling up of new and often unnecessary debts by states, cities and towns.

It is interesting to speculate on what would have happened if the Mellon recommendations had been followed in 1921, and the bait of tax exemption removed from government securities.

which they would be grateful. Then if they did not comply, the remedy would be to take away the code and enforce the anti-trust laws. That might work. But when codes have been imposed, just how are you going to collect enforcement? If anybody thinks the Government can do it with injunctions, he is deceiving himself. Organized labor knows that. That is why NRA is in the humiliating position where labor is threatening to strike because NRA is unable to enforce its own codes. And General Johnson is in the unhappy position of asking labor not to strike for rights which he lacks the means to insure to labor.

It is serious, potentially very serious. It is in the complexity of NRA, in the falacy of its economic theory and in the great distortion with which the law is being put into effect that the administration is most dangerously threatening. It can stand the incident of the air mail. It cannot stand the halting of recovery and the provoking of great industrial disturbances.

DETROIT AND TORONTO START PLAYOFF SERIES

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, March 22.—After a curtain-raiser in the form of the Today's scoreless tie between the Montreal Maroons and New York Rangers, third place contenders, the National Hockey League's playoff series begins in dead earnest to-night.

With the Detroit Red Wings making their first bid for the league title since they entered the circuit in 1926, the other four clubs which qualified in the regular season hit the trail while winds up in the battle for the Stanley Cup and the world's championship trophy, the "day horse" team which finished first in the American division, plays the Toronto Maple Leafs, last year's league champions. Meanwhile, the second place club of the two sections, the Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks, clash at Montreal.

The Detroit-Toronto game is the first of a series of the best three out of five games which sends the winner directly into the Stanley cup finals in addition to bringing possession for a year of the Prince of Wales cup. The Blackhaws and Canadiens meet in the first half of a two-game duel, decided on a total goal basis. The winner must meet the victor of the similar clash between the Rangers and Maroons, who play their second game at New York Sunday.

The Red Wings and Leafs meet again here Saturday, then shift to Detroit to complete their series March 26 and 28 and 30 if necessary. The second Chicago-Canadian encounter will be at Chicago Sunday night.

FINALS IN VALLEY BOXING TOURNAMENT SET FOR TONIGHT AT KANSAS CITY

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, March 22.—Sixteen amateur boxers from Western Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma will battle tonight for the right to represent the Missouri Valley region in the National A. A. U. boxing tournament at St. Louis April 4.

The fighters, 10 Missourians, one Kansan and four Oklahomans, have survived two grueling nights of fighting in which more than 40 contenders were eliminated.

Of the 1933 Missouri Valley champions, only one was still for the finals tonight. He is Junior Munson, Chicago (Okla.) Indian Institute light heavyweight. He, however, is not seeking to retain his crown in the middleweight class.

Last night's card was featured by the stout-hearted fighting of Paul Gallagher, blond 147-pound Hutchinson (Kan.) scrapper, who came from behind to win a decision over Ciro Ramirez, William Jewell College entrant. Gallagher barely staved off a knockout defeat in the first round. He was floored for the count of nine and the bell came to his rescue. He turned loose furiously in the second and third rounds to win the verdict.

Although Truman Kennedy Hutchinson (Kan.) featherweight, dropped a close decision to Gene Driscoll, Kansas City, tournament officials decided to permit the Kansas to enter the national meet. The crowd protested the Driscoll decision.

Featherweight—Johnny Estrada, Kansas City, vs. Hiroshi Masaharu, Shizuoka, Japan; Gene Driscoll, Kansas City, vs. George Hand, Calicoe Indian Institute; Featherweight—Gene Driscoll, Kansas City, vs. William Sharp, Chillicothe Indian Institute, vs. Willie Turner, Morehead, Ky.; Lightweight—D. V. Liddell, Chillicothe, Ky., vs. Floyd, Kansas City; Heavy-Heavyweight—Junior Munson, Chillicothe Indian Institute, vs. Bud Schudlinski, Kansas City; Heavy-Heavyweight—Horace Carles, St. Joseph, Mo., vs. Joe Kemperer, Kansas City.

Ohio Body to Send Team of Four Boys.

The Ohio Association of the A. A. U. will send four boys and the Inter-Mountain group three to the national senior A. A. U. boxing championships at The Arena on April 4, 5 and 6. Benny Kessler, manager of the tournament, was informed early today by the chairmen of the Boxing Committees from each of the districts.

"Out of the Ohio district championships which we are holding on April 2 instead of March 26, as originally planned," wrote Phil Stewart, "we expect to have four good boys to enter the national. I will mail the entries on the night of April 2, so consider you will have the closing date in this instance, which I understand is Saturday."

H. M. McNeil used the wire to inform Kessler that three boys will represent his Inter-Mountain district. McNeil lives in Salt Lake City, Utah.

It took a letter from the United States Indian Vocational School at Phoenix, Ariz., however, to stir the excitement of local officials of the A. A. U. yesterday. It was from Dick Brenton, boxing coach at the school, and sought information on the national championships with the view of escorting here a team of full-blooded Indians.

CHARLOTTE GLUTTING AND DEBORAH VERRY ENTER GOLF FINAL

By the Associated Press.

PINEBURHST, N. C., March 22.—Charlotte Glutting, New Jersey star, and Deborah Verry of Worcester, Mass., today advanced to the final of the thirty-seventh annual women's North and South golf tournament.

Miss Glutting defeated Avelia Gorczyca, Fort Worth, Tex., second champion, in today's semifinal round, one up. She jumped a stymie on the eighteenth green to do so. Both had medal scores of 79, the same number of strokes which gave Miss Glutting the qualifying medal.

Mrs. J. J. Lawlor of New Rochelle, N. Y., who staged two sensational upsets by advancing over Jean Bauer of Providence, R. I., and Jane Douglas of Beverly Hills, Calif., in the early rounds, was no factor for Miss Verry today. The Worcester girl continued the steady striking which has marked her playing throughout, to win, 5 and 4.

The winning teams will go to Columbus (Mo.) Saturday to compete in the State Y. M. C. A. sports carnival at Missouri University. Thirty teams are entered in the basketball tournament.

Miss. Glutting defeated Avelia Gorczyca, Fort Worth, Tex., second champion, in today's semifinal round, one up. She jumped a stymie on the eighteenth green to do so. Both had medal scores of 79, the same number of strokes which gave Miss Glutting the qualifying medal.

Mrs. J. J. Lawlor of New Rochelle, N. Y., who staged two sensational upsets by advancing over Jean Bauer of Providence, R. I., and Jane Douglas of Beverly Hills, Calif., in the early rounds, was no factor for Miss Verry today. The Worcester girl continued the steady striking which has marked her playing throughout, to win, 5 and 4.

Nye Proposes High Income Tax During Conflicts.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—As a deterrent to war, an amendment to the tax bill has been proposed in the Senate to have income taxes boosted 100 per cent and virtually confiscate incomes of over $10,000 a year while hostilities continue.

It was offered by Senator Nye (Rep.), North Dakota, who told reporters "if the Government would send men to their death during time of war, it is just and logical for it to confiscate wealth and every other thing that goes into carrying on war."

UNION MEN AT WEIRTON PLANTASK FOR MORE RELIEF FUNDS

Delegation Takes Appeal to Hopkings; Removal of Blue Eagle Urged.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—As a demand for the removal of the Blue Eagle from the Weirton Steel Co. was laid before W. H. Davis, NRA compliance director, today by a group of outside union workers of the Weirton plant. William J. Long, chairman of the union committee, told newspaper men the workers made the demand because of "the company's violation of the Recovery Act."

The call on Davis followed a visit to Harry L. Hopkins, Emergency Relief Administrator, at which the union men asked for more relief grants to the 600 men "suffering from discrimination." In a letter left with Hopkins, the workers said "the company-controlled relief officials are using their power over Federal relief funds to starve our people into submission to the company, which is defying the Government on all sides."

The convict, serving a 25-year term for robbery, was set free last Oct. 12, murdered Sheriff Jess L. Barber and then rode away with Dillinger. Two weeks ago he testified that Harry Pierpont also was in the jail that night. Last week he refused to testify against Charles Makley. Pierpont and Makley have been convicted and are awaiting sentence to death by electrocution for the Barber murder.

Contract Bridge Lesson

Use Double If Opponents Seem Weak

Possible to Enter Bidding on Second Round When Opener Passes.

By P. Hal Sims

LAST week we dealt with the deductive double of an opening bid of one after two passes. The second position in which such double can be made is on the second round, when the opening bidder passes his partner's response of no trump. For instance, if the bidding goes:

North—One heart.
East—Pass.
South—One no trump.
West—Pass.
North—Pass.
East—(?).

East is now in a position to make a deductive double, in view of the weakness displayed by both opponents.

According to the old auction definition, a double in this position would be positive, a bidding double because it was not made at the first opportunity. The double passed on the first round when he could have doubled. However, even in the later days of auction many of us made the double very optional when, after first passing an opening bid, we doubled a different bid. Here, for instance, East has passed a heart bid which he had the opportunity to double and has only taken action when that bid was changed to a no trump. This, however, is an academic point only. In contracts you may well decide to pass on the second round as above described as a negative double, but which nevertheless is very much directed at a "business pass" by West if his hand can justify it. We have scored many penalties of from 450 to 2000 points under these circumstances—either against one, no trump doubled or against double rescue bids into which our opponents floundered in their efforts to find a better contract than a no trump in which to take their punishment.

AGAINST SIMS PLAYERS you will not derive much profit from a deductive double, and even less from this position when the opening bid was made by dealer or second hand.

As you know, the fact that he passes the no-trump response shows that his hand is defensive in type; that what it lacks in suit length it amply makes up in primary values. Consequently, if you step in lightly you are apt to be met with a redouble which one of you must take out; and now you may be the one to be doubled at two and thoroughly chastised. However, when the opening bid was made third hand and there is a no-trump response, made by two passes, you should be willing to take action on the same grounds as I employ in all positions against systems which make the requirements for opening bids lighter in the first two positions than for third hand.

MAY shaded third-hand bids being mainly defensive in purpose, they must take some punishment on a proportion of hands where the cards are against them. When doubling these bids, if your partner can leave the double in, your side has twenty-six cards which are entitled to a plus score. The question now is whether or not you have a game, and in either case whether the penalty you collect is worth it. Can the plus score you could have registered by securing the declaration?

Remember that in all uses of the double you must bear in mind what you know of the bidding system employed by your opponents. You are always entitled to ask them what system they use and to receive an explanation of any bids forming part of it which may mean something different to the partner than they do to you. In tournaments players almost automatically announce their system as they take the seats, unless their opponents obviously know it. For those prominently identified with the well-known system, this leaves no place for kidding. My partners have been known to ask me verbatim why I do not try the Sims system, when we have got to a bad contract and they think that I am to blame for it.

Who Said:

You've heard these sayings many times, of course, but do you know who said them first?

- 1—"To the victors belong the spoils."
- 2—"Keep the wolf from the door."
- 3—"But there was no joy in Mudville."
- 4—"Great about the bush."
- 5—"Boys will be boys."
- 6—"The ladies are on the sides of the strongest."

Britain's Woman Labor Leader

Jennie Lee

ALTHOUGH she doesn't like to be called "the rebel student," Miss Jennie Lee, a leader of the Labor party in Great Britain, is a dyed-in-the-wool radical, and proud of it. A member of the House of Commons at the precocious age of 24, she brings the valiant spirit of a crusader to the forgotten men and women of England. Touring the United States under the guidance of the International Labor Organization, this energetic young woman will soon return to Scotland to face Parliament. She's not worried about the stump-speaking and hand-shaking (that's an old story to her), but she's determined her party will not fall down on the job. While in St. Louis this week she made two vigorous speeches in a day. This is her third trip to the United States, but almost all her sightseeing has been done from a train platform.

"If the Labor party movement of Great Britain stands true, if it has the courage to face the greatest vested interests—then we can beat back the Fascist movement in England," she said. "But if the third Labor government trifles as the first two did, then it will be kicked out, and deservedly so."

She has black bobbed hair, unruly and tossed back from her face, giving an impression of extreme youth. As for her age, she is 29 years old and looks hardly 21. Her complexion is fresh and clear, and the Scotch in her is discernible at least half a block away. slender and about 5 feet 2 inches in height, she is quick of movement and speech; her face is plump, almost childlike, which is probably due to an untrained diet.

As for clothes, she has a sure instinct for sport suits, plaids, gay scarfs and low-heeled shoes. However, in the sanctity of her room she was wearing black slacks, a maroon-colored robe and no makeup. For some reason this intensified the magnetic quality that makes her a good speaker and organizer. It explains how she fires off, discouraged coal miners to wild cheers and the casting of many votes in her favor. Casually smoking a cigarette, she spoke in a quiet, restrained voice of the things that are as important to her as life or death.

"At the moment Great Britain isn't very sure what it wants, but it certainly knows what it doesn't want. What are these things? Well, Fascism and war and millions of unemployed people."

EARED in proletarian surroundings — her father and grandfather were miners and came involved in the University politics first of all. Then before I left college, I was connected with the Labor group and Communists were all around me. I was born in Edinburgh, Lothian in Fifeshire, Scotland, to the University of Edinburgh.

"Like any student in America who is politically inclined I became a Labor candidate in the miners' Trade Union," said nominated the candidate for the Miss Lee. "My father followed in Independent Labor Party in North Lanark, Scotland. Then I had a bit of luck. A by-election (I think you call them special elections in your country) was held in order to fill a vacancy. There was a lot of stir and excitement about this, for it was regarded as an indication of the later elections. My opponent was a Lord, one of the old feudal families, but it happened that I won by an overwhelming majority."

Four months later she had to go through the whole thing again at the regular elections, and was successful as before.

McDonald, prime minister of Great Britain, is a sore spot with the members of the Labor group, and of course, Miss Lee has no love for him. She accused him of betraying his own class of workers to the conservatives. When the Labor government fell out of Parliament in November, 1929, she lost her seat in the House of Commons.

This didn't bother her at all. She decided that travel would broaden her mind and prepare her for further political work. Off she went to Persia, Asia, Germany, France and Russia. This was no tourist jaunt; her object was to study the economic and emotional unrest in each country. She is enthusiastic about the great experiment in Russia and claims that the dictator-phobia in Europe are due to the block against that nation. Her suggestion to those who want to see what is happening in Russia and don't have the money to travel, is to hitch-hike (but what about the ocean?)

There's one remarkable thing about her speech; it's clear-cut and not embroiled by a too-vivid imagination. Her reasoning is the shortest possible distance between two theories, stripped of the misleading fallacies that many politicians indulge in. Unlike most women she doesn't qualify everything she says.

When asked about the hunger marches so prevalent in England, she said the object was to bring the desperate condition of the working class before the attention of the whole world. "The hunger march is a militant front effort, drawn from the Labor group and Communists, all working together to change all at once to change yourself! To the contrary, you're as badly off as when you started and, as long as you continue your present tactics, you'll get worse—fast!"

You say you want to change yourself—you know that you need that change. So you've been watching yourself—and getting exactly nowhere.

Concerning the government now in control, Miss Lee characterized it as a "sheer conservative group, oppressing poor people, throwing more men out of work, and decided militarily."

Other Points of Etiquette.

By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post:
Should grandchildren (and other relatives) be sent notes thanking them for flowers they sent to my husband's funeral?

Answer: If you are seeing them, you would not thank them except by telling them that you thought their flowers were beautiful. If they are living at a distance, you would tell them this.

Dear Mrs. Post:
I am in mourning for my father and my visiting cards have a narrow black border around them. Is it better to enclose my husband's and my joint Mr. and Mrs. visiting card, which has no black border, with gifts that we send while I am in mourning, or should the card have a mourning edge on it, too, and which card should be left at the houses of friends who are not in when we call?

Answer: Your double card should have a mourning edge on it. That your husband may not actually be wearing black clothes does not affect the conventional propriety of a mourning card shared with you.

Leave this same card at the house of friends.

Dear Mrs. Post:
If Mr. and Mrs. "A" receive a formal invitation to meet two very prominent women at an afternoon tea at a friend's house, what visiting cards should be left if both go? If Mr. "A" goes alone; if Mrs. "A" goes alone?

Answer: Mr. "A" leaves his own card on each lady. He does NOT leave his wife's card. Mrs. "A" leaves her card on each lady, and the other hand leaves two of her own and two of her husband's.

What is the best way to get rid of wishing these things? Turn your cap up to the right; reach out to the left; are you posting?

Dear Mrs. Post:

My maiden name is not euphonious with my husband's surname, and I don't like to prefix it to his name now that I am about to become divorced from him. Is there no alternative besides writing his name in full, which I have a right to do since the court granted me rights to our temporary pleasures; but, after all, it is necessary to have a married ladder or romance files right now if you "mean business."

Evidently, you are too fond of marriage to have thought and planned for your future and matrimony. If you marry, probably you may be bored to do without the divorce and full rights to our little girl?

Answer: You can take your own middle name, if it was a surname, or you can take your mother's maiden name or even the name of one of your grandmothers—if necessary.

It is, undoubtedly, rude and impudent for persons to converse in a language not known to those in the room; but you can never expect to stop the girl from speaking her native tongue in your presence; you do not have to take this card.

Is it impossible for you to speak German? She understands and speaks your language; you understand and speak hers; you want to be fair.

You think too much, altogether, protecting yourself. You will do that way, too. If you go into another venture, do you always want to be guaranteed success?

Dear Mrs. Carr:

AM to be married in the very early part of May. My young man will wear a Tuxedo. To you, I do not know at what time this should be worn for wedding—or what I should wear. But the hour is perfectly best.

A Young Man
Objects to a Practical Girl

However, Foresight Is as Necessary as Romance for Happy Marriage.

By Martha Carr

My dear Mrs. Carr:
AM past 23 years old. I've been going with a girl seven months whom I've known for four years. About the first of the year I asked her how long I was going to see her after I got a job. I hadn't been working then for 10 days (I'm a boy). My answer was, "After I get straightened out, I will ask her to 'go steady' with me. I've been working for two months and I know she wonders why I haven't asked her.

Mrs. Carr, I've known twice how hard it is to hurt—hurt pretends to be hurt again, so do I want to be hurt again? I don't want to get attached to me until I feel secure again. But I know this girl thinks that some day we will marry, and I am afraid to let this

Dear Mrs. Carr:
I am in mourning for my father and my visiting cards have a narrow black border around them. Is it better to enclose my husband's and my joint Mr. and Mrs. visiting card, which has no black border, with gifts that we send while I am in mourning, or should the card have a mourning edge on it, too, and which card should be left at the houses of friends who are not in when we call?

Dear Mrs. Carr:
When I am there, her mother will be in and speak German to her, knowing that I do not understand it. I do not think it right for people to speak in another language before those who do not understand it.

Am I right in telling this girl to get out with others and see people outside the house? I told her I would not see her so often as I have been doing.

Answer: Your double card should have a mourning edge on it. That your husband may not actually be wearing black clothes does not affect the conventional propriety of a mourning card shared with you.

Leave this same card at the house of friends.

WHILE my husband and I often receive wedding announcements we seldom receive birth announcements. I want to send out announcements and would like to know if I should send them to whom I sent wedding announcements?

Birth announcements are sent, usually, just to relatives and close friends.

My dear Mrs. Carr:
PLEASE tell "Heartbroken" that as long as I live I will always care for her. Although her parents object to me because of the time, this could be stopped at 8:30 p.m. I have loved "Heart-

THE tattooer is more efficient, however, when it comes to bald heads. A bald-headed man can acquire a head of hair of any color he desires with permanent paint.

One man was so well pleased with his tattooed wig that he came back later for side burns.

Lodge emblems, patriotic insignia, and sentimental designs form a large part of Mr. Grimm's work. A St. Louis street car conductor is one of his best customers. This motorman has a large yellow street car on one arm and below it, the American flag and a Masonic emblem. On the other arm he carries a large cross inscribed "In Memory of Mother," and the insignia of a rifle association to which he belongs.

Then he told a story of a St. Louis family, consisting of mother, father, and five children. Mother and father are generously tattooed and each child, when he attains sufficient age to stand the needle without being squeamish, is similarly marked. The name of each child is tattooed on the mother and as additions to family arrive, the record is brought up to date.

About 10 per cent of a tattooer's customers are women. Butterflies and spiders are big favorites with the fair sex, and they usually have them placed on their shoulder blades. Requests for tattooed lips

The mention of money brought up the depression, but it seems that the tattoo artist has been very fortunate. Of course, there has been some decrease in business, but once a man is bitten by the tattoo bug he will give his last dime for a new tattoo mark, however small, and trust to providence for his breakfast.

AND, it's not only the hobo and the drifter who are susceptible to tattoo fever. Business men, society, and even nobility are vulnerable. Business men usually are satisfied with a lodge emblem or two, but Mr. Grimm recalls a society girl who had a slave bracelet tattooed on her wrist. Another thought so much of her pet pomeranian that she had it tattooed on her thigh. To the Earl of Craven is given the credit for starting the tattoo craze in the United States way back in 1893, but the actual origin of this noble art is lost in antiquity.

There are great many tattooers in the United States but few tattoo artists.

"Most of them," says Mr. Grimm, "use a cheap ink that washes out inside of a few weeks. And then, too, there's danger of infection unless you know you are dealing with a reliable tattooer—one who's in the game for the love of it, instead of just for the money."

Bert Grimm gives his customers anything they ask for, but maintains that his drawings are art with a capital A. When asked to execute a design that is not a stock item with him, he sketches it on the skin before he applies the needle. He has created thousands of designs that have been indexed for ready reference.

W. C. Fields May Do 'Rip' For Pictures

It Will Be a Musical—Lilian Harvey Makes Up With Fox Company.

By Louella Parsons.

HOLLYWOOD, March 21.—THE beautiful 20-year-old wife of John D. Spreckels, sugar king, has been secretly making screen tests for Charles R. Rogers, Charlie, according to our very reliable sleuth, first saw Mrs. Spreckels at the races at Aqueduct and, not knowing who she was, asked for an introduction so that he might sign her as the society woman in the lead opposite Jack Haley in "Here Comes the Bride."

All is sweetness and light again with Lillian Harvey and the Fox Company. Winfield Sheehan, on the strength of the great big reconciliation, gave Lillian a new contract by which in the future she will play all the foreign versions and there will be no dubbing. Her bone of contention, we remember, was that although she spoke three languages Fox used another actress to dub in the German and French versions for her.

Well, we've had everything in the movies—why not a musical based on Rip Van Winkle?" W. C. Fields will play "Rip" and if Paramount keeps anything of Washington Irving's famous old character, we'll see Fields juggling his way through the Catskill Mountains before he takes his big nap.

We're in a hurry without Love. Absence of Love is Hate. Absence of Love is War. Love is co-operation, giving, sharing, marrying, in its true sense. The world needs the occult, alchemical marriage of Mars and Venus. This ideal marriage would mean co-operation, joy, construction, production, more for all happiness, peace in industry, in politics between nations, between individuals. No one who fully appreciates the occult can afford to be without it.

The recent stories published that Virginia Valli and Charley Farrell are about to close their matrimonial chapter seem to have been the figment of somebody's imagination. When I saw them at the Beverly Hills Derby dinner, I have never seen Charlie more attentive to Virginia.

IN THE GIRL FAMILY —By— BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT.

"I HAVEN'T had any dinner," Allen said. "I think there's a restaurant a couple of blocks away."

There was. It was a small hole-in-the-wall sort of place, as white and shining as snowy enamel and polished nickel could make it. Steam came hissing from the gleaming coffee urn on the white counter and on the wall above the high stools were placards that read: "Oyster Stew, 25 cents"—"Swiss Steak with Onions, 25 cents" "Coffe With Real Cream, 5 cents."

"I'll drink some coffee with you," Susan said, glad that it was only a nickel. She felt vaguely unhappy when Allen spent money on her, knowing how little he had for extras like tea at the St. Vincent or even a fifty cent bunch of violets.

"I thought I ought to tell John about you and me before he went away, so I did," she said taking out her vanity case and powdering her nose and chin. "He told me that he knew about us."

Allen was looking at the wall placards as she spoke. "I'll have some fried ham and celery and a baked potato," he said to the dark-haired waiter behind the counter. "And bring two cups of coffee."

"What did John have to say to you about it?" He turned again to Susan.

Susan snapped her vanity case shut and tucked it into her coat pocket. She looked carefully at her reflection in the wall mirror opposite her and pushed a strand of golden brown hair behind her ear. Took it her a long time to answer. "He thought I ought to tell the family about breaking everything off with Wallace. He wanted me to do it before he left. He said he was afraid that if I didn't tell them then, I wouldn't do it at all. You know he thinks that they run me."

Allen took two tissue paper napkins from a little stand on the edge of the counter, unfolded one and gave it to her.

"It isn't your family that's important right now," he said. "It's your friend, Steffen, and what you've said to him."

Susan nodded, drooping in her high chair and stirring and stirring her steaming coffee.

"Did you give him back his ring, Susan?"

"Oh, yes." She had done that much, at any rate, and the thought that she had comforted "Allen" with his ring made her feel sick.

"That's everything was over?"

Susan's troubled glance flashed up at him from under her lashes. Her color, deep rose from the air outside, went a shade deeper.

"He was simply impossible, Allen," she said, shifting in her chair. "I spent a whole hour trying to make him understand that I'm really through with him—and he sat eating lunch just as calmly as if he'd been discussing the weather!"

"You had lunch with him, Susan?"

"Why, yes. I couldn't get out of it. You see, I went to the bank at noon and after we'd talked for a minute or two he decided to go out somewhere to talk over things—but we didn't get anything settled at all. No matter what I said, it didn't seem to have much effect on him!" Her voice trailed off. Allen was staring at her in blind astonishment, just as John had stared at her that afternoon.

"You mean you aren't through with that guy yet?" he asked after a long silence.

Susan nodded. "That's what I mean, I'm sorry," she said. "Allen, you just don't understand what Wallace is like! He's one of these people who really won't take 'No' for an answer—and so I've decided that every time I see him I'll just have to go on telling him that I'm through with him—like 'letting the old cat die,' when you're stopping a swing. You can see that's the sensible thing to do, can't you?"

"No." The word came, sudden and short and heavy. "You could have said everything you had to say to that fellow in ten minutes. You promised me you would. Instead of that you had lunch with him—and you're talking now about every time you see him. It looks to me as if you haven't changed anything very much. You're still engaged to him, aren't you?"

"No, in my own mind, Allen."

"Why, of course, you're still engaged to him." Allen got up from the table and walked across the room to pay his bill. They went out, leaving their coffee and Allen's plate of food untouched.

A BLOCK away from the station, he bought a newspaper, and all the way home on the street car he read the first section of it, handing Susan the section containing the woman's page. But he did not speak again until he sat with his hat pulled down over his straight nose, his eyes fixed on the advertisements above the window.

In silence they left the street car, and neither of them spoke until they stood before the little Shop Fixery with its shadowed doorway. Then Allen said. "You'd better go on ahead now so that your people won't know you've been out with me." Susan's smile was extreme bitterness in his tone.

This was the place, just out of sight of the house, where he always stopped to give her a last kiss. But tonight, although the street stretched dark and deserted on both sides of them, he did not try to detain her.

"Good-night," he said, and that was all.

"Good-night." Susan started away and then came back to him. "Wallace said he'd be out to see me soon," she said, raising her face

SUSAN BRODERICK,
young and pretty
member of a poor but aristocratic family, is engaged to Wallace Steffen, partner of a famous banker. Susan is exceptionally fond of Wallace but is not sure that she loves him. Susan is more interested in men than in the men around her, whom her mother relatives ignore. They discourage Susan's and John's (her brother) friendship with Wallace, but Wallace's family is the late mother's relatives. John is tired of his relatives' superior attitude, upbraids them for being snobbish
and wants to leave the old folks and join them.
John's party at Cullens' is a gay, informal affair. Susan, preparing a salat at the party, feels ill and goes to bed at her end looks up to see Allen standing there. As she looks at him, she sees it is Allen, not Wallace, the love of her life. Nell Cullen, who advises her not to announce her engagement. Two days later, however, Susan goes to see her mother to tell her the announcement in the paper. Aunt Edna has given it to the society reporter. Susan is a widow, and goes away without arran gaging for her daughter's board.
Susan wants to get a position but realizes she has no qualifications.
The night she stays up to open the door for Allen, and they realize they are in love with each other. Susan, however, finds it hard to break her engagement to Wallace.

Allen was looking to have him stoop suddenly and kiss her, tell her that he knew she really meant to end their engagement and just didn't know how to manage the thing. "And I've made up my mind not to be at home when he comes. That will convince him that I'm through with him better than anything I can say will do it. I'll go over to Cullens' for dinner, then we'll be together again."

Allen made an impatient movement with his shoulders. "Why go to all that trouble? Why don't you simply tell him how you feel about him? That is, if you want to—I'm not sure that you really do want to."

He sounded almost indifferent.

"You know I want to."

She left him and ran across the snowy yard to the side door. The family had gone to bed and the dinner dishes were still piled on the sink in the kitchen just as she had left them. Trust Aunt Edna and Letty not to tell anyone!"

Presently the water began to run hot from the faucet, she heard Allen come in at the side door. The floor of the rear hall creaked under his feet. There came the tiny faraway sound of his bedroom door opening and closing.

The house seemed very still after that, and Susan had a feeling that it must be the dead of night, although the kitchen clock said that it was not quite half past nine. She put the pans away, hung up the dishpan and loaded a tray with the dishes she had washed and wiped. As she put them away in the china cabinet in the dining room, she glanced uneasily over her shoulder at the black doorway of Uncle Worthy's den and the parlor doorway across the wide hall. In the winter both rooms were a little like caves, she found herself thinking, where the family hibernated, shivering away from the bracing cold and the clean, wintry smell of snow that she loved.

Above her head board cracked and she glanced nervously into the hall one more time. Susan was coming very quietly down the stairs. She could hear soft, slow footsteps—and then, in another second, she saw Allen come around the turn from the landing.

He stood in the doorway and she saw with a thrill of pride in him that he seemed to fill it with his height and the width of his shoulders.

"Susan!" All the anger was gone out of his face now. He was the confounding young man who had stood in his dripping clothes before the parlor fire a week before and told her that she was in love with him. "Susan, come here and kiss me goodnight."

Jacket Dress
Is One-Piece
Outfit, Also

By Dixie Tighe

NEW YORK, March 20.—EVERY spring we go into a fine state of confusion trying to discover in advance whether the spring is the spring in which we are striving to make our jacket dresses look like ensembles or one-piece affairs.

The advertisements, the preview fashion gossip forecast jacket dresses in mid-winter for spring and then, lo! the debate gets mader and we like to choose sides. But, no, it's our annual surprise. It seems that the smart thing to do is to have a dress and jacket this spring that allows the dress to assume the identity of a one-piece affair or, at will, convey the idea that it is a dress with a jacket.

One to illustrate the general idea is with a wrist length crepe jacket buttoning at back or front; the dress features a collar that is adjustable high or low.

A simple and conventional black and white dress is one of the most successful of an important designer. And, for color this house boasting about a green, purple and yellow in a closely massed floral print.

Prints are doing different little tricks this year... after being used for self-trimming as in a small diamond pattern which uses its dot to outline trimming—the dots are pleated in such way that the line of dots form a design of their own appearing as flounce trimmings on skirt jackets or bodices.

Apple Pudding

Three cups sliced apples.
One cup sugar.
One tablespoon flour.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
One tablespoon lemon juice.
One teaspoon cinnamon.
One-half teaspoon cloves.
Four tablespoons butter.

One egg beaten.
Mix apples, sugar and flour. Add rest of ingredients and pour into greased shallow baking dish or pan. Cover with dough, made with two cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, five tablespoons lard, one-third of water.

Mix flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in lard with knife. Mix with knife, add water slowly. When stiff dough forms, pat it out and fit over apples. Make four holes in top and bake 35 minutes in moderate oven. Serve warm with cream.

If meat or fowl stock is not available, bouillon cubes can be substituted with satisfying results.

Butter milk makes better biscuits than corn bread and muffins than ave. milk.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

FATHER OF 370 CHILDREN—King Chulalongkorn of Siam (1853-1910) ruled that country for 42 years. In accordance with royal tradition, he married his own sister but lost her in a shipwreck, because she was unattractive and could not be saved. He was an enlightened ruler with a good education, who effected many beneficial reforms in his kingdom. He had 3000 wives and 370 children. At one time 45 sons were being educated in England.

It's Still a Nice Town

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

NEW YORK CITY again grabs the front page with a firm grip on both ears.

In this town they rob you in the poorhouse.

That's certainly scalloping the edges on graft. The boys clipped an old pauper for three thousand berries. In return they gave him a coat for Christmas.

Our statue of civic virtue represents a fat thug stepping on a woman's face. The only criticism we have to make is that he ought to be wearing spiked shoes.

What was a pauper doing with three thousand dollars? Well, when you go to the New York poorhouse you are still in the high rent district.

the Associated Press.
LIVERPOOL, England, March 24.—A crowd estimated at 20,000 persons today saw the ninth race running at Aintree, near Liverpool, the Grand National Steeplechase of four and one-half miles, known as the toughest of all horses races. The race was won by Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller, at odds of 19 to 2.

J. B. Snow's American owned Delaneige was second, and Thormond owned by John Hay Whitney, third in the field of 30. Coming from behind on the last turn around the course, Golden Miller gave the favorite players their first victory in many years. Delaneige and Thormond II also were well backed.

W. Parsonage's Fabra, long shot winner of the 1931 running, was still backed.

American Ting to Victory. The victory had an American ring, as Miss Paget was the first American to win the race.

Two of the other American horses, M. D. Elair's Prince Cherry and F. Ambrose Clark's Sorley Boy, dropped out early in the race. Sorley Boy was pulled up, while Prince Cherry fell. Southern Hero also fell early in the race.

Immediately after the race, Miss Paget began receiving cables of congratulations from her relatives and friends in America.

Statistics estimated that the even leading horses in the betting were backed with an aggregate of nearly a half-million dollars in the future books.

The feature of overnight betting was the strong backing which appeared for Really True, which rose to a position second to the favorite at 21 to 2.

Golden Miller, the winner, reigned the leader at 19 to 2, with Delaneige, and Ready Cash third, each at 10 to 8. Sorley Boy, at 13 to 1, Forbra at 100 to 7 and Troadero 20 to 1, completed the list of favorites.

The crowd was still pouring through the gates when W. Warner's spring Morning won the opening race of five furlongs by a neck.

Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's American-owned On Post, Sir Victor Sarsfield's Swoon was third. The second race went to the Aga Khan's Monks, with a dead heat on 8. Handera, Farmer Hes. Almond Hill was third.

Field of 30 in Main Race. The field in the Grand National was reduced to 30 shortly before the horses started to the post when about 100 outsiders, was scratched.

Previously J. C. Boulard's Sonnus was scratched.

The treacherous jumps took their lightest toll in yesterday's race, no rider or horse being injured. The sun failed to break through the clouds, but the vast crowd, said to be one of the largest in the history of the race, was able to follow the running in the way with the aid of glasses. Twenty bobbies, carrying stretchers and first aid kits, took their positions at the dangerous water jumps before the race.

The small field, in contrast to the record field of 66 in 1929, enhanced the chances of Miss Paget's horse. After four hours' rest at the first camp, the field quickly settled down to a beautiful contest. There was not a single spill within view of the grand stand.

An inspection of the course showed the turf to be fairly firm but badly torn up in places from yesterday's race. It was a colorful scene as hundreds of bookmakers backed the odds and received a big play from the crowd.

Not Always to the Swiftest. The race has not always been the swiftest. One course lies over two miles, 428 yards of rolling terrain, the field taking it twice for
